The Council has launched a 'Safeguarding Awareness' campaign which aims to inform people about adult abuse and how to report it

Recognise abuse

PEOPLE are being encouraged to look out for and report adult abuse to ensure no one in Hackney is left suffering in silence.

The Council has launched a 'Safeguarding Awareness' campaign which aims to inform people what abuse is, where to go for support and how to stop it happening.

Cllr Jonathan McShane,

Some of the warning signs

- Bruising
- Weight loss
- Mood changes
- Strange clothing
- Loss of money

“Adult abuse can take many forms and happen anywhere at any time, but it's always wrong”

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “Adult abuse can take many forms and happen anywhere at any time, but it's always wrong.

“There are also many people who witness abuse, but either don't realise it, or are not sure what to do. The message here is simple: if in doubt, just let us know. It may be a false alarm, but you could be saving someone from a life of misery.”

The campaign will see a series of posters promoting the need to look out for and report abuse, with the tagline 'Abuse: Recognise It, Report It, Stop It'. A new advice leaflet has also been published.

There are many kinds of abuse. Some of the most common include physical, sexual, emotional, financial, neglect and discrimination.

Furthermore, anyone can be an abuser, including a friend, relative, neighbour or carer. Abuse doesn't just take place in homes or care homes. It can happen anywhere, such as in the street, at a bus stop, in a park or leisure centre.

Signs to look out for include unexplained bruising, weight loss, inadequate or inappropriate clothing, withdrawn behaviour, loss of money, or a carer unwilling to allow access to a person.

Stop loan sharks now

Amina Hussein, from the London Community Credit Union, with 'Glenda the Shark' and Cllr Sophie Linden at Ridley Road Market

A CAMPAIGN has been launched to tackle loan sharks in Hackney and bring them to justice.

The Council has joined forces with the national Illegal Money Lending Team to crack down on loan sharks who make their victims' lives a misery.

Borrowers are often trapped in spiralling debt by illegal lenders who resort to threats to pressure them into repaying loans at extortionate rates.

With a lack of paperwork, victims are kept in the dark about how much is owed and can end up paying back hundreds of pounds more than they first borrowed.

“Loan sharks are criminals who prey on vulnerable people and... fleece their victims”

On 17 January, the Council's Trading Standards Team went to Ridley Road Market where they were joined by 'Glenda the Shark', from the Stop the Loan Shark Project (pictured). The team was on hand to give help and advice to those who might have already taken out a loan, as well as raising awareness of the dangers of loan sharks.

Deputy Mayor Cllr Sophie Linden, who attended the event, said:

“Loan sharks are criminals who prey on vulnerable people and are a blight on our communities. They fleece their victims and have been known to use intimidation to get their money.

“The Council wants to let residents know that we will not allow this bullying and criminal behaviour and we will work with our partners to target those who think they are above the law and can get away with it.”

The team also offered advice on how loan sharks can be avoided and reported, and recommended the London Community Credit Union (LCCU) as a safe and legal alternative.

The LCCU teaches people the basics of financial planning, and offers similar services to a bank.

News in brief

New 'quietways' cycle routes

HACKNEY is set to welcome one of London's first 'quietways', a network of cycling routes that are being introduced across the capital.

The route, which is expected to be completed by late spring, runs from Bloomsbury to Mare Street, with an extension to Walthamstow to follow. Construction on another route, from Waterloo to Greenwich, has also begun.

Sustrans cycling and walking charity has been awarded the three-year contract by Transport for London, and will be working with councils to develop these new routes. They will replace the National Cycle Network with direct and clearly signed paths, following lower-traffic roads, towpaths and routes through parks.

The routes will be largely unsegregated on quiet roads, but where they join main roads, segregation and direct crossing points will be provided.

Five other cycle routes are currently at consultation stage, with a proposed Aldgate to Hainault route also passing through Hackney.

It is hoped the new routes will increase the number of cyclists on the road. The aim is for every London borough to be served by quietway cycle routes, and a budget of £123 million has been set aside for this.

Time capsule dating back to 1934 discovered under Hackney Town Hall

Mayor Charles Fisher Yates lays the foundation stones of Hackney Town Hall – where a time capsule was unearthed

A TIME capsule containing relics and records from the borough's past has been unearthed from beneath Hackney Town Hall.

The brass canister was buried in 1934 by the then-Mayor, Cllr Charles Fisher Yates, during the laying of the foundation stone of the current Town Hall in Mare Street, which replaced a Victorian building.

The capsule, now more than 80 years old, was discovered earlier this month by workmen carrying out maintenance work on the listed Art Deco building.

The foundation stone ceremony also coincided with a celebration of the beginning of the Council's slum clearances in Hackney which saw residents rehoused in improved accommodation throughout the borough.

Mayor Jules Pipe opened the capsule on 13 January and found it contained four Council agendas from 1933 and 1934; a programme for the ceremony; and the Hackney Borough Council Act 1931, which related to the building works.

These will now be given to Hackney Museum for closer inspection and to display.

Mayor Pipe said: “These documents look to be a fascinating record of how our current town hall came to be. They may have been buried 80 years ago, but the Council then faced many of the same issues we do today, including dealing with the fallout of recession and replacing inadequate housing for its residents.”

Community safety wardens can help to address any issues affecting the community

DID YOU KNOW?

Photos: Gary Manhine

Community safety wardens keep the borough's streets in order, by regularly patrolling them, so residents feel safe. They also ensure the welfare of beggars on the streets, and stop people littering and urinating

Walking with the wardens

By Sheerie Barker

STREET drinking, drug taking, illegal trading and begging are just a few of the things that community safety wardens deal with on a daily basis.

They patrol the streets seven days a week and can issue fines for antisocial behaviour such as littering, urination, noise, dog fouling and graffiti. They also have powers to seize alcohol and counterfeit goods.

But what is it like to walk a few hours in their shoes? I went to find out.

Sam, Tom and Gavin are three of the 16 wardens who act as a link between the Council and the wider community. First stop, Dalston, where they spot a regular beggar beside a cash point. The man is said to have had problems with gangsters in his home country and refuses any help from the wardens from fear of being tracked if his name is 'in the system'. He flees the scene as they approach.

Tom, 21, says: "You get a lot of street drinkers down here. Some people feel threatened by them, but once you stop and talk to them they're very genuine people. When you hear how they've come to that point in their lives, it makes you respect your life a lot more and also respect them for what they're going through."

The wardens patrol until 4am in Dalston and Shoreditch, managing the delicate balance between those who go out in Hackney and the people who live there.

We jump back in the wardens van, which is

“We are public servants, we get to know the people and they should know we can offer help”

Wardens Sam and Tom talk to chef Kemal Tural on Mare Street linked up to Hackney's CCTV unit, and head to the Narrow Way.

Sam and Tom spot an illegal trader selling CDs. As they get nearer, he packs up his stuff, jumps on a bike and pedals off into the distance. Tom says: "He's been warned about illegal street trading. If he continues, he will be fined. We'll come back with the police and seize his CDs and he'll be issued with a fixed penalty notice."

Being a warden is about more than just giving out fines. Both Sam and Tom build relationships with local businesses and residents of all ages, and they are a great source of information.

The duo continue through St John's churchyard on the look-out for street drinkers and beggars. In recent months 'hotspots' including the Narrow Way have been targeted in joint operations with the police.

The wardens also put those in need of support in touch with organisations that can help.

Back on the Narrow Way an old man has damaged his mobility scooter. Tom calls the man's son and waits until he arrives to take him home.

Sam is approached by a member of the public and taken to a bag that's been left in the street. He reports the suspect package to the police and his office. Emergency planning officers arrive to cordon off the area and the police follow. It's not long before the all clear is given and the cordon removed. Mare Street gets back to its usual ebb and flow of people and traffic.

When asked about the pitfalls of the role, some say the verbal abuse. As if on cue, Gavin is shouted at by a passer-by. But he just shrugs it off and says: "To have a job like this, you need to keep a cool head."

Sam concludes: "We are public servants, we get to know the people and they should know we can offer help."

Four new health hubs, which are based in community centres in four estates across the borough, are set to open this year

FOUR new health hubs are being launched in Hackney to give residents access to a range of services and activities under one roof.

The hubs, which are funded by the Council and run by charity Shoreditch Trust, are based in community centres in Stamford Hill, Pembury, New Kingshold and Marsh Hill estates.

They will be staffed by health workers from Homerton hospital, who can provide services that residents would usually need to go to a healthcare setting to access.

Delores Wilson was one of the first residents to use the Stamford Hill hub to get a health check.

She said: "I think it's a good idea that the health hub is on the estate. I'm fussy about my health and I love being healthy, not sick, so it's great there is a health coach here to motivate me.”

Health coaches support residents for up to eight weeks, to help them identify their goals and take advantage of services such as free exercise classes, support with weight loss, NHS health checks and giving up smoking.

Jo Evans, a health coach on Stamford Hill estate, said: "This is a really exciting scheme to be part of because it will make health services and activities much more accessible to people who might not otherwise access them."

Cllr Jonathan McShane,

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "The health hubs will put high quality, free health services and activities in the heart of our estates. Health is one of the Council's top priorities and this innovative scheme will give residents more choice about where they access services and support to achieve their goals."

Three of the hubs are set to open next month. The fourth, on Marsh Hill estate, will open in the summer. The hubs will operate for an initial two year pilot period.

Tom Piper – theatre designer, Stoke Newington resident and co-creator of the famous ceramic poppies installation at the Tower of London – was ‘overwhelmed’ by the public’s response to the artwork

By Hattie Worsley

AS a teenager, I thought I would discover a cure for cancer,” says Tom Piper, theatre designer, Stoke Newington resident and co-creator of the world famous installation at the Tower of London – which saw 888,246 ceramic poppies gradually flood its moat last year.

“I went to Cambridge to study Natural Sciences. The trouble was, I discovered that coming up with a cure would actually be quite difficult,” he adds, laughing.

“As a child I’d always loved to build things. I made treehouses and puppet theatres. And then one day, my friend Sam Mendes said he was going to direct a play. I said I’d build the set for him – and it started from there – though he ended up far more famous than me!”

By the time he left university, Tom had worked on over 30 productions, and abandoned science in favour of the arts. From Cambridge, he went to the Slade School of Art, London, to study theatre design, via a detour to France.

He says: “I ran off to Paris before the course ended, when I got my big break: a chance to work with theatre director Peter Brook on his production of the ‘Tempest’ in 1990.

“What I love about theatre design is that it’s collaborative. Through the costumes, the set and the rest, theatre designers create the world of the play.”

Given the success that followed, including being appointed an associate of the Royal Shakespeare Company in 2004, it would be easy to assume that Tom would want to slow down. But he is driven to open theatre up to new and diverse audiences.

He says: “I think the Hackney theatre scene is great. I’m far more interested in what goes on “A vast number of people saw the poppies who wouldn’t usually go to see an exhibition or the theatre”

here than I am in what’s opening in the West End.”

Tom has just finished working with director Michael Boyd on a production of ‘Orfeo’ – the first opera ever to be staged at the Roundhouse in Camden. He says: “East London Dance collaborated in the show, so kids from the schools in Hackney were working alongside the professional cast, doing some amazing work.”

Nothing, however, prepared him for the huge audience that the installation he designed with artist Paul Cummins at the Tower of London – ‘Blood Swept Land and Seas of Red’ – attracted last year.

“Over five million people came to see it,” he says. “And then think of the number who didn’t see it directly, but engaged with it through the media. It was overwhelming.”

For a man used to working behind the scenes, the limelight that accompanied the installation, marking the 100th anniversary of the First World War was unexpected.

Tom says: “It has been great to see people think more about the nature of theatre design itself because of it. And a vast number of people saw the poppies who wouldn’t usually go to see an exhibition or the theatre. But I don’t think we’d anticipated how much it would become a pilgrimage.”

He continues: “You can’t escape the impact of the wars here – you can see the bomb damage everywhere. One of the key starting points for the project was the fact that within weeks of the First World War being declared, the Tower’s moat was being used as a training ground for 16,000 members of the ‘stockbrokers’ battalion’, the City workers who had signed up in droves. Some might have come from nearby Hackney.

“The 888,246 poppies, one for each British and colonial military death during the war, certainly give a dignity to those soldiers from poorer communities and lower ranks whose individual sacrifices had previously gone unmarked publicly.”

Its impact was made even more dramatic for Tom by the fact he was away for the final three weeks of its installation, returning on 10 November.

He recalls: “I was astonished by the crowds and the strength of the colour in the winter sunshine ... Nothing like that will ever happen to me again.”

1. Posters for the food waste campaign; 2. Door knocking to encourage residents to recycle food

Food waste recycling up

MORE people than ever are recycling their food waste in Hackney.

Since November, residents have been encouraged to give the Council's blue bin food service a try and report back on how they get on. Staff spoke to 5,000 residents face-to-face and an additional 2,500 people sent in their feedback online or by post.

Following the campaign, 45 more tonnes of food waste was collected in November and December compared to the same period in 2013. That's an extra 6,500 blue bins worth of food being recycled and turned into compost instead of being sent to landfill.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "People are giving it a try and seeing that having a small caddy, which is emptied regularly, is much cleaner than having a large bin with food and other waste mixed together."

"The Council has to spend millions of pounds a year disposing of waste which could be recycled. Recycling food waste helps the environment and saves money, so it's great that more people have started using the service."

Fear about mess and smell is one of the main reasons that people say they do not recycle food waste. At the start of the campaign, the Council began issuing new, thicker, stronger bin liners which contain the food waste without splitting.

Alexandra, from E8, said: "I did not use a blue bin until now because I thought it would be disgusting and smelly, but it is actually the other way round. The kitchen feels so much cleaner because the waste food goes into a sealed unit so there's no smell."

Residents who gave their feedback on the campaign were entered into a draw. Five winners will receive £100. Congratulations to Natalie Duffin, David Newbery, Marja Elva, Sarah Greenhalgh and Karolina Muszynska.

News in brief

Dog fouling down 30 per cent

INCIDENTS of dog fouling have decreased by 30 per cent across four hotspots in Hackney after the Council took part in Keep Britain Tidy's 'we're watching you' campaign.

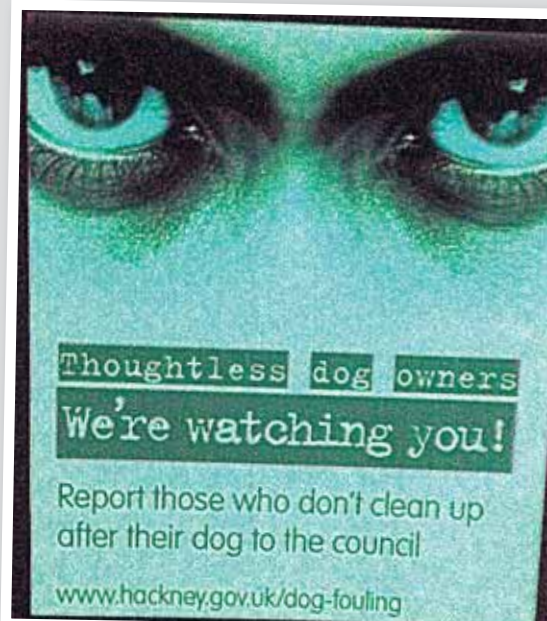

The anti dog-fouling drive is based on research that showed owners are more responsible, and pick up after their pets, when they think they are being watched. More dog fouling tends to occur at night time and during the winter months, as some people feel they can't be seen under the cover of darkness.

Glow-in-the-dark posters have been put up around Mabley Green, London Fields and Clissold Park – encouraging dog owners to clean up after their pets this winter.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "We hope that these encouraging results continue as we move on to other dog fouling hot spots."

Four people have been fined for failing to clean up after their dogs in Hackney in the past three months.

The Council needs evidence in order to successfully fine or prosecute people. Residents who are concerned about dog fouling, or have any information about owners who do not clean up their pets, should visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/dog-fouling; e-mail: enforcementsupport@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 4810.

Green changes proposed to the way parking permits are charged in Hackney

THE Council wants to change the way it charges for parking as part of a drive to reduce pollution in Hackney.

The proposed changes, to be rolled out over three years, will see parking permits rated according to vehicle CO2 emissions instead of engine size, with the most polluting vehicles charged more.

Many areas of Hackney suffer some of the worst air quality levels in London. It is hoped the new banding scheme will encourage people to consider using more environmentally-friendly cars or other forms of transport.

The proposals, due to be considered by Cabinet this month, are part of the Council's wider ambitions to reduce harmful pollutants.

Changes outlined as part of the Parking Permits Review include: cars built before 2001 moving up a band in the charging scheme, reflecting the levels of CO2 they produce; a removal of height, weight and length limits for short-stay parking; and a £50 levy for diesel cars, which are the most polluting vehicles.

Residents and businesses will be told of any agreed changes next month. There will be no changes to permit prices in 2015. The full charges will come into place in 2017, with a 50 per cent increase of the proposed charge difference coming into effect next year.

Hackney chosen to pilot early years pupil premium scheme

HACKNEY has been chosen to pilot a new scheme aimed at helping the most disadvantaged children receive high-quality early education.

The early years pupil premium (EYPP) is being tested in Hackney ahead of its roll out across England in April.

In total, seven local authorities were chosen to trial the scheme from this month, splitting a total of £1million, of which Hackney received £191,543.

The funding will provide nurseries, schools and childminders with an extra £300 each for disadvantaged three and four-year-olds who meet the eligibility criteria. Early years providers can choose how best to use the money to help narrow the gap in attainment between the most and least advantaged children.

Angela Scattergood, head of early years at Hackney Learning Trust, which will distribute the funds, said:

"We have done a lot of preliminary work as we wanted to start as early as possible. This has included setting up systems and supporting early years settings to identify children eligible for the funding.

"As part of the pilot we will be evaluating how the scheme is administered, how providers are using the funding and how effective their approaches have been." Early years providers in Hackney, Blackpool, Bristol, Cambridgeshire, Northamptonshire, North Yorkshire and Stoke-on-Trent will report back to the Department for Education before the full £50million EYPP scheme is launched nationally.

New head of learning

THE borough's children's centres, schools and adult education services will soon have a new captain at their helm after Anne Canning was appointed head of Hackney Learning Trust.

A mathematician, who has spent her entire professional life working in schools, Anne was recruited from her current post as Service Head of Learning and Achievement at Tower Hamlets Council, where she is responsible for improving overall educational standards.

"I am delighted to be offered and accept this post to continue the successful work in Hackney"

Prior to that, she spent 10 years as headteacher at Camden School for Girls, one of the highest achieving state secondaries in North London.

Anne, who is due to start her post in Hackney at the end of March, said: "I am delighted to be offered and accept this post to continue the successful work in Hackney, especially working with partners to further raise standards."

Sixty one per cent of Hackney pupils achieved five or more A* – C grades at GCSE in 2013, a slight increase from 2012 and topping a decade of rising results for the borough.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "We're delighted to welcome Anne to the borough. She brings with her a wealth of expertise and I'm confident that her experience at Tower Hamlets will equip her to lead our schools to continued excellence."

Anne takes over from Tricia Okoruwa who died in September after a long illness with cancer.

Long jump champion, JJ Jegede, with The Urswick School pupils

Long jump champ motivates The Urswick students

PE lessons took a great leap forward last month, when students at The Urswick School met British indoor and outdoor long jump champion JJ Jegede.

Hackney resident Jegede, whose personal best is a jump of 8.11 metres, spoke to sports students at the E9 school's sixth form as part of Sky Sports Living for Sports. The free secondary schools' initiative gets sports stars to use their skills to build the confidence of young people.

Talking about his roots and growing up in the borough, he said: "I used to look at trainers in shop windows and not be able to afford them. Now I make a living from jumping all over the world and companies are sending me their trainers to wear."

Jegede went on to win a sports scholarship at Loughborough University and compete in three European championships and the 2014 Glasgow Commonwealth Games.

Rachel Kelly, assistant headteacher at The Urswick, said: "It was fantastic to see JJ in action with some students. He was so inspiring and motivating."

Fanatical about film

By Dila Tumer

YOUNG people saw their films come to life at a screening as part of a project for the BFI Film Academy, delivered by a Hackney-based charity.

Twenty-three students, aged 16 to 19, stepped into the limelight at Rich Mix Arts Centre on 11 January to showcase the results of three months of filmmaking completed with support from the Eastside Educational Trust. The premiere was followed by an award ceremony celebrating the young people's achievements.

Four Hackney students premiered the following films at the event: Amid Ojubanire, 17, 'Seeing Red'; Mark Kamara, 17, 'Persistence'; Miri De Villers, 18, 'Broadway Behind The Market';

“The screening was a great way to celebrate – not just as a group but for all the groups involved” and Liam Athiemulam, 16, 'Leo'. The audience was asked to vote for their favourite film and give feedback. Amid's 'Seeing Red', a thought-provoking story of a young man who is battling his demons, proved to be the most popular.

He said: "Our team worked effectively, putting our creative minds together to create our film which was a success.

"The screening was a fantastic way to showcase all our hard work, and it was done so professionally, so it really felt special and a great way to end the journey."

Mark, 17, added: "The screening was a great way to celebrate – not just as a group, but for all those involved. I've really enjoyed it and got a lot out of it."

During the course, which started last October, participants regularly met with professionals from every area of the film industry and took part in workshops and master classes to improve their skills. They then worked in small groups to develop a script, shoot and edit their own ideas, and produce films that explore different themes.

The young people are now set to work with Shoreditch-based marketing company, Tug Agency, to learn more about promoting and distributing films digitally.

News in brief

Great start for Youth Games

A SERIES of qualifying events kick-started this year's London Youth Games, which are set to be the biggest ever.

Clapton Girls' Academy won their under 16s basketball match against Islington's Elizabeth Garret Anderson School on 20 January. The 66-4 score line was a great start to the borough's Youth Games campaign.

The match was just one of many events taking place as part of Big Kick Off Week, a recruitment drive for participants and volunteers for the Games.

It is the largest annual youth sports festival in Europe, with nearly 130,000 young people taking part last year, when Hackney won the title of 'most improved borough', coming sixth out of 33.

Team GB basketball captain Drew Sullivan, who used to play for the borough at club level, gave the Clapton girls some advice. He said: "Getting ready to represent the place where you grew up in an event like this is one of the things you take with you for the rest of your life and I consider myself extremely lucky that I was able to participate."

The games run until July. For more info, visit: www.londonyouthgames.org

Children's book swapping fun

BOOKS are set to fly off the shelves and into five Hackney venues as the annual Children's Book Swap returns to the borough.

On 14 February, Rich Mix, Waterhouse Restaurant, Hoxton Hall, New Kingshold Community Centre and Stamford Hill Community Centre will all be opening their doors to families with unwanted kids' books, for an action-packed day of swapping, sharing, story-book reading and activities.

Children can pick up a book for free at any of the venues, where they will also be able to drop theirs off for another child to discover and take home. Last year, over 2,000 books were swapped this way in London. Sally Goldsworthy, the event's creator, said: "The London Children's Book Swap has gone from strength to strength with more top cultural venues joining us each year in a collaborative commitment to literacy and inspiring a love of reading and stories among children."

Hackney events take place between 12noon and 4pm. For more info, visit: www.facebook.com/londonchildrensbookswap

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Hackney's new stop smoking service can help residents give up cigarettes forever

Stub out cigs for good

A NEW stop smoking service has been launched in Hackney, giving a boost to people hoping to quit this year.

Funded by the Council, specialist stop smoking advisers are running clinics in venues across the borough, including eight GP surgeries and more than 40 pharmacies, libraries, shopping centres and supermarkets.

The advisers offer free, confidential support, as well as free stop smoking treatments, such as nicotine replacement therapy on prescription for 12 weeks.

You are four times more likely to quit when you use a stop smoking service rather than going it alone

Advice is on offer in the evening and on Sundays, making the service more accessible to those who work during the week.

Bilingual advisers are also available, offering specialist stop smoking support in different languages. There is also a service for young people, and one for pregnant women at Homerton hospital.

Robson Barreto, 33, quit with the help of stop smoking advisers in Hackney. He said: "I had incredible support on how to cope with this big change and since then my regular visits have encouraged me to keep myself clear."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for

Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Hackney's new service gives smokers free, high quality support at convenient times and locations. You are four times more likely to quit when you use a stop smoking service, rather than going it alone, so I urge smokers to contact our service today."

News in brief

'Outstanding' anaesthetic service praised at Homerton

HOMERTON hospital has become the first in the country to receive a prestigious award in recognition of its outstanding anaesthetic department.

The Anaesthetic Clinical Services Accreditation (ACSA) measures hospital performance against clearly defined standards and guidelines.

Since the scheme's launch in 2013, more than 40 NHS anaesthetic departments have begun working towards meeting its standards. Homerton, however, is the very first to achieve the ACSA accreditation.

Consultant anaesthetician, Dr Sade Okutubo, said:

"The process has led to our going over every aspect of the service with a fine tooth comb. We can confidently evidence a high quality service and care for our patients."

Lend your voice to the NHS

NEW monthly forums are set to begin in February, where residents can discuss local health services along with wider issues affecting the NHS.

The NHS Community Voice project will invite guest speakers to discuss health topics chosen by patients, as well as cross-cutting themes such as improving access to services, better links between health and social care, and helping people to feel more in control of their health. These forums build on the work of existing Patient Participation Groups, which take place at GP surgeries.

The new project is funded by Hackney's Clinical Commissioning Group and run by Healthwatch Hackney, in partnership with Age UK East London.

New wellbeing network launches to help people towards better mental health

CITY and Hackney Mind is set to launch a new network of services for adults to help people with their mental health.

The City and Hackney Wellbeing Network, which launches on 2 February, is a partnership made up of 11 mental health agencies with experience of working with different communities in the borough. Commissioned by the Council, the network aims to help people prevent the onset of mental health problems and to alleviate issues such as stress, anxiety and low mood. It will also support people with more severe mental health conditions.

The aim is to offer a coordinated single point of access; online referral and direct phone lines; and a consistent level of support wherever clients access the service.

Krishna Maharaj, City and Hackney Mind's Chief Executive, said: "This coordinated approach will reduce waiting times, and determine the best packages of support for a wide range of mental health issues."

A launch event is set to take place at Hackney Museum on 28 January, from 2.30-5pm. For more info, visit: www.cityandhackneymind.org.uk; or call: 0800 612 6585.

A person aggrieved by the order may, by application to the High Court within 6 weeks from that date, challenge its validity under Section 23 of the Acquisition of Land Act 1981. PRELIMINARY NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MAKE GENERAL VESTING DECLARATION
STATEMENT OF EFFECT OF PARTS II AND III OF THE COMPULSORY PURCHASE (VESTING DECLARATIONS) ACT 1981
THE LONDON BOROUGH OF HACKNEY (DALSTON LANE TERRACE) COMPULSORY PURCHASE ORDER 2013
PART 1

Power to make general vesting declaration

1. The London Borough of Hackney (hereinafter called "the Council") may acquire any of the land described in the Schedule above by making a general vesting declaration under section 4 of the Compulsory Purchase (Vesting Declarations) Act 1981. This has the effect, subject to paragraph 4 below, of vesting the land in the Council at the end of the period mentioned in paragraph 2 below. A declaration may not be made before the end of a period of two months from the first publication of a notice which includes this statement except with the consent in writing of every occupier of the land affected.

Notices concerning general vesting declaration

2. As soon as may be after the Council make a general vesting declaration, they must serve notice of it on every occupier of any of the land specified in the declaration (except land where there is one of the tenancies described in paragraph 3) and on every person who gives them information relating to the land in pursuance of the invitation contained in any notice. When the service of notices of the general vesting declaration is completed, a further period begins to run. This period, which must not be less than 28 days, will be specified in the declaration. On the first day after the end of this period ("the vesting date") the land described in the declaration will, subject to what is said in paragraph 4, vest in the Council together with the right to enter on the land and take possession of it. Every person on whom the Council could have served a notice to treat in respect of his interest in the land (other than a tenant under one of the tenancies described in paragraph 3) will be entitled to claim compensation for the acquisition of his interest in the land, with interest on the compensation from the vesting date.

Modifications with respect to certain tenancies

3. In the case of certain tenancies, the position stated above is subject to modifications. The modifications apply where the tenancy is either a "minor tenancy" i.e. a tenancy for a year or a yearly tenancy or a lesser interest, or "a long tenancy which is about to expire". The latter expression means a tenancy granted for an interest greater than a minor tenancy but having on the vesting date a period still to run which is not more than the period specified in the declaration for this purpose (which must not be more than a year). In calculating how long a tenancy has still to run, where an option to renew or to terminate it is available to either party, it shall be assumed that the landlord will take every opportunity open to him to terminate the tenancy while the tenant will use every opportunity to retain or renew his interest.
4. The modifications are that the Council may not exercise the right of entry referred to in paragraph 2 in respect of land subject to a tenancy described in paragraph 3 unless they first serve a notice to treat in respect of the tenancy and then serve every occupier of the land with a notice of their intention to enter and take possession after the period (not less than 14 days from the service of the notice) specified in the notice. The right of entry will be exercisable at the end of that period. The vesting of the land will be subject to the tenancy until the end of that period or until the tenancy comes to an end, whichever happens first.

Signed:  Stephen Rix, Head of Litigation, For and on behalf of the Corporate Director of Legal, HR and Regulatory Services, London Borough of Hackney Dated: 15th January 2015.

Invitation to Give Information

Every person who, if a general vesting declaration were made in respect of all of the land comprised in the Order (other than land in respect of which notice to treat has been given), would be entitled to compensation in respect of any such land, is invited to give information to the Council by making the declaration in the prescribed form with respect to his name and address and the land in question. 1-4. Allen's Gardens in Bethune and Manor Roads; 5. 1953 map extract showing the estate; 6. Beautiful communal gardens, which are now open to the public; 7. The Building News 1875 ground plan of a flat

Location, location, location

By Sally England

AS London's population swelled in the second half of the 19th century, and areas like Hackney grew from rural villages into crowded suburbs, an extreme housing shortage developed. Some developers quickly put up cheap homes which sometimes collapsed just as swiftly, but others were more creative.

One such man was local builder Matthew Allen, who worked for the Improved Industrial Dwellings Company designing solid, affordable flats for workers to help get them out of the terrible slum dwellings of the time. In the 1870s, Allen introduced the idea of flats for the middle classes, building an estate of blocks divided into 'cottage flats' of various sizes on the corner of Bethune and Manor Roads in Stoke Newington.

The idea was completely new: flats in buildings that looked like houses rather than apartment blocks, most with their own entrance, all with access to superbly appointed communal grounds. It was also one of the first estates to use reinforced concrete.

Allen had attempted to combine the best features of English houses, Scottish tenement blocks and French gardens. Like his 'industrial dwellings' the flats had safety windows, bow fronts and solid floors which offered good noise insulation as well as being fire and vermin proof.

Rents for the different sized properties varied from £20 to £60 per annum, with even the cheapest offering a comfortable five rooms along with private entrance lobby, lavatory, coal cellar and larder. The most expensive flats were quite luxurious, with 13 rooms and their own bathroom as well as a veranda with steps down to the shared garden.

“Proofs of...the eagerness with which good houses are sought by the public”

The gardens that gave their name to the development were perhaps its most unusual aspect. Gravel walks lined with borders led to a croquet lawn, bowling green, tennis courts – the Bethune Lawn Tennis and Bowling Club was based there until 1929 – a playground, greenhouses, kitchen garden, vineries, shed, coach house, stables, gardener's cottage and a wash house for each flat.

Residents paid a small annual fee towards the cost of plants and could buy produce from the gardener who called at each flat daily to take orders.

In the centre of one vinery was a communal garden room, complete with piano, used for dances and evening entertainments and upstairs was a billiard room. Today the communal gardens are open to everyone and still produce fruit and vegetables through a market garden run by Growing Communities.

The Times newspaper of 21 February 1876 described the development as rewarding Allen 'for the excellence of his intentions and the forethought of his design by returning him valuable proofs of the want for such accommodation and the eagerness with which good houses are sought by the public'. But Allen's pioneering idea never really caught on.

Although the split-floor design of the flats foreshadowed later maisonettes, at the time it was not repeated elsewhere and instead large mansion blocks closer to the City and West End, within easy reach of work and nightlife, became the norm for middle class apartment-style living.

A century after it was built, the estate's owners submitted a planning application to demolish the blocks and replace them with a much higher density of flats. Action against this proposal led to the buildings being listed at Grade II status and they were saved from destruction.

Some £11million has been spent on renovations in recent years, with Matthew Allen's pioneering cottage flats set to continue providing quality rented homes in Stoke Newington for a long time to come.

Cornmeal muffins

Makes 4 large muffins

Preparation time
20 mins
Cooking time
20 mins

TO make these delicious muffins, you'll need muffin cups, or a muffin tin and either tulip papers or baking paper.

Ingredients

- 85g fine cornmeal
- 115g plain flour
- 3 tsp baking powder
- 40g granulated sugar
- ¾ tsp salt
- 225ml milk
- 1 egg, beaten
- 30g melted butter.

and gently stir by hand until just mixed. Do not over mix. This is really important, as too much mixing will result in a dense cake-like bread, not a light muffin

- Divide the batter between the four muffin cups in the tray, so that the mixture is just above the level of the tray
- Bake for 20 minutes or until done.

Method

- Preheat oven to 210°C. Grease and flour four muffin cups, or line a muffin tin with four large tulip papers. If you don't have any to hand, use circles of baking paper pushed down into the tray (to get the right shape draw round a saucer)
- Mix dry ingredients (cornmeal, flour, baking powder, sugar and salt) together in a bowl
- Combine wet ingredients (milk, egg and melted butter) in a separate bowl
- Pour wet ingredients into dry ingredients

This recipe comes from the Spence Bakery, an independent business in Stoke Newington which takes baking seriously: they mature their dough overnight and loaves are made fresh each morning. The bakery supports North London Action for the Homeless with regular food donations.

Have your say on licensing the local private rented sector

THE Council is currently reviewing the services offered to tenants and landlords in the private rented sector in Hackney.

The Housing Quality Network has been appointed as an independent consultancy to carry out the survey. They are looking at how an increase in private rented properties is affecting the wider local community.

As part of this review, the Council is considering whether a discretionary licensing scheme might improve housing standards in Hackney.

This is an information gathering exercise which will lead to the development of a strategy for the future of Hackney's private rented sector.

It follows a Living in Hackney Scrutiny Commission investigation which reviewed the potential for further licensing of the private rented sector in 2013/14.

The Council wants to hear from local private tenants and landlords, residents and businesses, in order to help support and improve the management of privately rented properties in the borough.

Residents can have their say by answering the private rented sector housing survey online at:
